sold the settlers will own and control the water company.

The quantity of water is fixed and definite. Each ten acres of land will be entitled to 37% inches of water for 24 hours every month, except in an extraordinary dry season when the amount will be a little less. During the winter of course water will be plenty, and during the spring, up to July 1st, the amount will be far in excess of this basis.

The price of water will be regulated by the cost of taking care of the company's property, and distributing the water to the stockholders. It is estimated that when the tract is fully settled this cost cannot exceed fifty cents an acre per year.

Says the Humboldt Times:

Good men for delegates mean good men for nominees. And this is the kind of material demanded by the party and by the interests of the country.

And again it talks to the point:

An exchange asks "why it is that the Democratic platform makers are forever referring to what their party did in the long ago, and never make any allusion to their more moderate history." The truth is, neighbor, they havn't any record to refer to, except that made between the years 1860 and 1865. We can excuse their silence on this bit of history. If the Republican party had taken up arms against the government and carried on a bitter war for party's sake and been badly beaten in the end, our platform makers and stump speakers would not indulge in flights of oratory and ringing resolutions on the beauties of our system of government, and the dead earnest wish of the party to perpetuate it, the immaculate purity of the party, its records and deeds at arase.

The sumptuary dodge is a poor apology. There is no dodging the fact that the Democratic party is firmly committed against giving the laborer one day in seven as a day of rest.

This from the Russian River Flag is to the point:

A Democratic Legislature passed the Sunday law; a Democratic Governor signed it; another Democratic Legislature refused to repeal it; Democratic Supreme Courts have held it constitutional. We are speaking about the same Sunday law which a Democratic convention proposes to repeal.
